➤ Butterfield & Robinson before branching out to offer his own unique, tailor-made trips. This is bespoke voyaging in a different league. He eschews all thing normal: 'The words "tour, authentic, product, passengers, sundowner, welcome drink and meet-and-greet" aren't part of our lexicon,' Brown says. Steering purposefully and determinedly away from the textbook, the conventional, and the package, he takes your wildest dreams and concocts a distilled and original version of them as a holiday. Whether you would love a road trip across the Rockies, to have tea with the King of Ladakh, go wine guzzling in Bordeaux or have an audience with Desmond Tutu, he gets in tune with your timings and your schedule and makes it happen. All decisions are made, all questions answered, all possible eventualities meticulously considered until you get this finely honed, seamless wonder trip. The Brown bit obviously comes from Philippe; the Hudson from his favourite 19th-century travel novelist WH Hudson (do read Idle Days in Patagonia).
